YK Communications Unveils The Tech Squad for Ganado High School Students

New program designed to offer tech perspective while closing the gap between teens and seniors

FEBRUARY 6, 2017 - YK Communications has partnered with Ganado High School to create The Tech Squad, an all-new program featuring a panel of tech savvy teens who want to provide technical services to the community while learning about leading-edge technology.

The Tech Squad offers a multi-pronged purpose that reaches teens and the community. Teens who serve in the Tech Squad get to participate in monthly technical support forums, in which community members are invited to receive no-cost tech support for smartphones, tablets, and laptops. Tech Squad members also meet quarterly for the Tech Squad Junior Board, which receives leading-edge tech developments from YK Communications.

According to Russell Kacer, President of YK Communications, “We are pleased to cultivate community service and technological learning in the students at Ganado High School. Our team is excited to meet the teens who participate in the program.”

Robin McCann, Ganado High School Counselor, said, “I believe the teens here are going to absolutely jump at the chance to leverage their tech knowledge for the community’s good.”

The new partnership between YK Communications and Ganado High School will benefit the community, especially senior citizens who need assistance with their tech devices. Teens on the Tech Squad will simultaneously have the chance to work with community members and further understand the challenges faced by the community. Community service meetings will be held March 21, 5:30-7pm; April 20, 5:30-7pm; and May 9, 5:30-7pm.

YK Communications hopes that the Tech Squad will instill further roots of responsibility and community service within each member. More information can be found at <http://www.ykc.com/tech-squad/>.
